Duties that in the rush of the winter have been neglected, now that the season of Lenten penances has arrived, rise before us in their righteous might. Clad in a suitable garb of sack cloth and ashes we begin violently to pay visits on poor relations who reside in the suburbs—calls which have been laying over heads like grim nightmares—are conscientiously paid. And then, too, the men must be looked out for. Now there are no receptions and card parties for them to attend, the so-called meeker sex must see that they are sufficiently amused to keep them away from the perniclousness of club life, and their spiritual welfare must also be looked after and see that they are properly carried to church. And while we are making our Lenten sacrifices suppose we deny ourselves the pleasure—the extreme, though wicked pleasure—of gossiping about our neighbor's affairs.

The unprecedented weather of last week and the commencement of Lent caused a great dearth of social enter-tainments; but several parties deserve attention from a pleasure-seeking point

Mrs. George Pollard and Miss Lunie Pannill left last week for Petersburg, to be with their father, Capt. Thomas Pannill, who was taken with a stroke of paralysis on Thursday.

Miss Fannie McDonald entertained a party of her friends Friday in a novel and attractive manner. The home of Miss McDonald's uncle, Mr. Bain, on Boush street, was brightly lighted and presented a gay scene, as about thirty-five young people gathered to spend a happy evening. The feature of the evening was a dramatic charade, which was given by five young ladles in quite a successful manner, caose taking part being Miss Cornelia McBlair, Miss Katherine Newbill, Miss Caroline Cohn, Miss Lella Hobson and Miss Arnold Walke. After the charade had come to an end delightful refreshments of a tempting nature were served. Among those who were present were: Miss Annie Voight, Miss Belle Heath, Misses Mary and Fannie Royster, Miss Katherine Peebles, Miss Nancy Freeman, Miss Bonnie Whitney, Miss Elizabeth Lloyd, Miss Kate Myers, Miss Annie Rogers, Miss Mary Clarke, Miss Annie Rogers, Miss Melissa Payne and others.

The hop which was to have been given on the receiving-ship on Tuesday was indefinitely postponed on account of the unpropitious weather.

The ballroom at the navy-yard presented a gay appearance on Monday evening, when the commandant and officers residing in the yard tendered a hop to their friends. The Naval Post Band played all of the new dance music for the participants, and gally did they trip the light fantestic toe until the clock in the tower chimed the midnight hour. Very few Norfolk people were present, the weather not permitting of such a long journey in evening dress, but those who did brave and elements were well repaid.
